

Another thing about aviation is—the visitor who flies here sees our city from the most critical angle. When the pilots of the Second Annual Arkansas Tour visit Hope tomorrow they will say what other aviators before them have said: That this is a good-looking city from the air, and its landing field is the best potential airport in the state.

Air Tour Planes Badly Damaged

Two Entries Out of Air Tour After Brinkley Crashes

Pilots Escape Without Injury When Ships Rammed in Landing

WOMAN PASSENGER Reporter for Fort Smith Paper in One of Planes

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Two landing field accidents to planes entered in the second annual Arkansas air tour occurred today at Brinkley, according to dispatches to the Arkansas Democrat from its staff correspondent on the tour. No one was injured. The most serious mishap was to a Detroit-Stinson Junior, piloted by Ollie Blum, with Cy Martin as co-pilot and two passengers, Miss Zela Tucker, reporter for the Fort Smith Southwest Times-Record, and Bill McNeill, also of Fort Smith. In side-slipping on the Brinkley field the plane did a ground loop, tearing off the landing gear, breaking the propeller and one strut and doing slight damage to one wing. Another Detroit-Stinson, piloted by Graham Williams, struck a post when landing and a strip ten to 12 feet wide was ripped from the bottom fuselage. Both the planes are definitely out of the tour, which stopped at Brinkley for lunch.

Many Planes Enter Annual Air Tour

18 Now Listed With Others Expected To Sign Up Soon

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Planes to the number of 188 had been entered today in the second annual Arkansas air tour which starts Tuesday morning. It is expected at least or perhaps two more entries will be listed before the first of the ships takes off at 8:15 Tuesday morning.

Labor Shortage Feared At Paris

Need More Than 100 Miners To Keep Output Up To Standard.

LINDSEY, Cal., Sept. 24.—Growing pomegranates, the original "love apples" is simply one of those things that doesn't pay, growers of this district have decided. Seven lean years have been for the persistent growers of the bitter-sweet fruit. Most of the growers have uprooted their trees a make way for other crops. The few who have held on will reap a slightly profitable crop this year, reports show.

Bureau of Census Admits Mistake

Says Error of 300,000 Bales in Georgia Ginnings Clerical

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—(AP)—The Census Bureau announced today that an error of 300,000 bales in the cotton ginning report yesterday was the result of a clerical error. In transferring the figures from the original sheet to the mimeograph stencil bureau officials said that a stenographer wrote 729,988 bales instead of 429,988 ginned in Georgia. The report was issued by the Bureau at 10 o'clock Monday morning and the error discovered and corrected at 2:30 p. m. It was the first time in recent years the bureau has issued an incorrect figure due to a clerical mistake officials said.

Toy Airship, Shown Here, Is Mystery

Prizes Offered for Best Letters On K. G. McRae Window

A mechanical mystery in which a toy Zeppelin airship appears to support itself in mid-air, appears in the Second street show-window of K. G. McRae Hardware company. An advertisement of the majestic radio, this display is featured by a series of prizes for the best letters explaining how the airship is actually supported in the air. A solid metal ring is constantly passed over the entire ship, cutting away all possible concealed supports, it appears. The display drew a continuous crowd on Second street this morning, and debate waxed hot and heavy as to how the effect was produced.

Record Crowd On Hand for Opening Day At The Fair

4,000 Attend Monday Night—40th Year of Southwest Ark. Event

FLYERS TOMORROW

State Air Tour Will Bring 25 Planes To Local Field At Noon

The Southwest Arkansas Fair opened its gates last night to the largest first-night crowd in the 40 years of its history. There were 3,500 paid admissions and more than 4,000 persons on the grounds for the short opening program Monday night. Monday afternoon the grounds were humming with activity as carpenters added finishing touches to booth repairs, and displays were put in place.

Show Arrives

The Gold Medal Shows, circus attraction during Fair week, came in on a special train Sunday night and its rides and concessions were opened on schedule in Fair park Monday. At noon today the crowd was returning to the grounds in full force, aided by bracing weather and a light shower during the morning which quieted the dust. Today's program is given over largely to civic organizations, but other features include a reunion of Civil War veterans, and the opening of the week's program of racing. On the track the horse events will include chariot races, Roman standing races, relay and running races. There will be a fireworks display tonight.

State Official Is Visiting Fair

Earl Page Here for Short Stay and High in Praise of Event.

Earl Page, State Commissioner of Agriculture, was in the city last night and today, guest of George Ware at the Experiment Station and an interested visitor at the Southwest Arkansas Fair.

"It may be true you people down here have suffered from a drought," Mr. Page said this morning, "but exhibits at you fair fail to convey that impression. I haven't seen finer agricultural products anywhere in the state. Hope should feel a just pride in annually staging an exposition which ranks as one of the biggest little fairs in the southwest."

Mr. Page left at noon today for first getting outside a slice of a trip to other sections of the state, watermelon which he missed by not being able to attend the last melon festival.

Peacock On Stand In Own Defense

Youth Accused of Torch Murder of Bride Faces Jury

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Earl Peacock took the stand in his own defense today in his trial for the murder of his wife, Dorothy.

His voice was low and quiet as he told of his schoolboy days. He told of his growing interest in radio work which finally drove out all thoughts of further schooling.

Attorneys then suddenly changed their line of questioning to the first meeting of the couple at the swimming pool at Bronxville, Earl went over the details of his runaway marriage and the short time he lived at the Heinzenman home in Bronxville.

"The quarrel that broke up was the culmination of many differences, mental and otherwise," Peacock stated. He said his wife's desire for parties and a gay life and his own preference for a home life were causes of most of their quarrels.

The noon recess was taken as statements which Earl had made to others about his wife was ruled out of evidence by Judge Tomkins.

Punches Man In Jaw; Must Buy Set of Teeth

TURLOCK, Cal., Sept. 21.—Cyrus Samuels either is going to jail or he is going to buy Elroy Gomez four brand new "store" teeth, valued at $75. Samuels and Gomez tangled in a brief fist encounter following an argument over Second street this morning, and debate waxed hot and heavy as to how the effect was produced.

Cotton Pickers Injured In Crash

Blytheville Given Hope Watermelon

Another Hope watermelon has gone forth to add to the fame of Hempstead county's champion farmers. Here is a story from Blytheville, as told by the Blytheville Courier News:

The office of Miss Willie A. Lawson, county superintendent, is besieged today with visitors. The reason? In her doorway is a 117 pound watermelon sent her by Miss Beryl Henry of Hope, Ark. A card attached says that this one of the "small" watermelons of the watermelon festival recently held in that city—that the others sent out of town as "souvenirs" of the occasion weighed 140 pounds.

Murder and Arson Charges for Girl

Negro Girl, 15, Who Burned Home and Killed Eight, Is Indicted

MEMPHIS, Sept. 24.—(AP)—Indictments charging murder and arson were returned today by the Shelby county grand jury against Rosebud Ankton, 15-year-old negro girl who confessed to officers that she started the fire which burned the industrial settlement home, a negro orphanage, August 30.

Eight children were burned to death in the fire. Of the three counts against the girl, two are for murder and one for arson.

The girl told investigating officials that she fired the home because of alleged ill-treatment of the inmates.

Victorian Modesty Back—But Only In Furniture

LONDON, Sept. 24.—Victorian modesty is having a rebirth in London with the result that table legs again are being draped and the "bare" sides of upright pianos hung with silk.

Footstools, pin-cushions and even portieres figure in the renaissance. Victorian jewelry also is being revived, due largely to American girls, who are buying early Victorian brooches and stomachers and having them reset as pendant earrings.

Furniture drapes are chosen to harmonize with the color scheme of each room. Only the smallest stumps of table legs are permitted to show beneath their ilk or muslin "trousers."

The Female of the Specie Make Best Home Brew

DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 24.—According to figures compiled by the vice squad of the police department here, women outnumbered men arrested in connection with the sale and manufacture of "home-brew" by three to one.

School Survey To Be Started Soon

Director Says Work To Be Completed By April He Believes

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 24.—(AP)—A basis for an agreement with the United States Bureau of Education for a survey of Arkansas state institutions of higher learning was reached today at a conference between Governor Parnell State Superintendent, school heads and Dr. Arthur A. Klein, director of the division of higher education of the Federal bureau.

Dr. Klein, who will conduct the survey, said they would begin as soon as possible and would probably be concluded by next April. The survey was requested by Governor Parnell as a basis on which to formulate a policy for the betterment of the state institutions.

Dr. Klein at the conclusion of the conference declared that he was pleased "with the co-operation shown by the school presidents" and that the conference had been "entirely satisfactory" so far as the Bureau was concerned.

A Study In Civics

SOMETIMES a little, first-hand glimpse of the conduct of some minor official tells you more about civic government in the United States than a whole volume of learned sociological dissertations could.

The following happened the other day in a good-sized middle western manufacturing city.

The scene is a speak-easy—an ordinary, dimly-lighted little place in a side street. Half a dozen patrons are drinking. In walks a police sergeant with two plain clothes detectives at his heels. The sergeant beckons the proprietor.

"Hey, Tom, what's this?" he says. "You're supposed to be closed."

The proprietor shakes his head.

"No, no," he protests in a low voice. "That ain't the way I understood it. Not at all."

"That's the word I got," persists the sergeant.

"No, Andy, you're wrong," says the proprietor. "Listen—come here and I'll explain—"

Sergeant and proprietor depart together into a back room, while the two detectives, left behind, stand smoking cigarettes and looking bored. Presently the officer and the liquor-seller emerge. They speak a few last words in a low tone; then the sergeant leads the detectives out, and the place goes on as it was before. It does not close, either on that night or on subsequent nights.

Just what lay back of that little incident is a matter for the imagination. But the affair speaks volumes. It is not merely a commentary on a certain type of prohibition enforcement; it is a vastly illuminating sidelight on the ins and outs of American city government.

Study that episode, understand it in all of its aspects—and you will know a great deal about the defects and injustices of civic affairs as they are practiced in the American democracy.

The Value of Churches

THIS little paragraph from the Churchman is going the rounds of the press:

A rich man who was asked to contribute to a church in Hartford refused to do so and said he would like to question the value of a church anywhere. I want you to think of something; what was real estate worth in Sodom?"

The value of churches should not be measured from a commercial standpoint. This life is so short, and the blessings of our great civilization are so trivial in comparison with the spiritual life in the Kingdom to come, that it is almost a sacrilege to make such comparisons and illustrations.

And yet we know the observation is true. Christian citizenship is the basis of all our worth-while advancement, and the rock on which our boasted civilization rests.

Take away our churches and the mob would soon dominate society, civilization would decay, and mankind would revert to a semi-savage state, with might rather than right as the arbiter of destinies.—West Point (Miss.) Times-Leader.

Sound Advice

AT Danville, Ill., the members of the "Far North Pilgrimage" of the South Arkansas Chamber of Commerce inspected the famous Guernsey herd at the Sugar Creek dairy farm, and heard these words of friendly counsel from its owner, C. H. Horneman:

"Grow no less cotton, but raise more cows. Don't spend huge sums of money for purebreds, but develop your own herds."

The sound program of dairy development for Arkansas is condensed in those two brief sentences. To make dairy specialists of a large number of our farmers would merely be to create in our agricultural industry one more group of one-crop producers. Dairying holds its promise not at a new specialty, but as a balancer of present farm programs, intended to provide income-earning work for the farmer and use for the farm plant all the year round, to supply cash income for the farm operations more profitable by maintaining and increasing soil fertility. Though raising more cows, the farmer who makes the most of his opportunities will, in Mr. Horneman's phrase, grow no less cotton or other main farm crop. That will be where he gets his profit out of his improved soil.—Arkansas Gazette.

A Hitch in the Program!

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—President Hoover's vigorous attitude toward the naval scandal has demonstrated that he does not fear to speak boldly and forcefully against selfish special interests when popular opinion is unanimously behind him. Just as importantly, it demonstrates what the taxpayer and the peace workers have been up against in their attempts to reduce both expenses and the danger of war through limitation of armaments.

The man William B. Shearer has been operating these last few years ostensibly as a red-hot 100 per cent American patriot who would save us from destruction allegedly plotted by Great Britain, Japan and a couple of hundred other nations. Mr. Shearer's idea was that if we had the biggest, bestest navy afloat, we would be safe. A novel, pamphlets, newspaper and magazine articles, radio speeches and many personal buttonholdings came from Mr. Shearer in his noble, self-sacrificing effort to put that idea across.

Not So Disinterested

Now it develops from Mr. Shearer's own admission that he was working for some shipbuilding companies which make boats for the navy and would like to make some more. But whereas Mr. Shearer considers his patriotic efforts worth more than $300,000 he has only been paid $51,000 for his big navy propagandizing and he has brought suit for the rest plus expenses. Hoover demanded an explanation from the companies under threat of federal prosecution.

someone's payroll. Just the other day your correspondent received from him a lengthy big navy article from some bellicose retired admiral. The smoldering fires of the town dump have doubtless consumed it by now, but search of the files reveals a masterpiece by Shearer himself of which some description may now prove interesting as showing the frenzies into which the gentleman worked himself during the white heat of his patriotism. This is a 45-page pamphlet published in 1928 after the Geneva conference during the big cruiser fight in which the big navy propagandists and the pacifists met in mortal combat.

The period of patriotic effort for which Mr. Shearer claims $250,000 for services and $50,000 for expenses runs from December, 1927, to March, 1929, so presumably part of the $50,000 went to produce this remarkable booklet.

The title is "The Cloak of Benedict Arnold" and the cover, tastefully done in black and yellow, shows a hairy paw with five vicious talons about to clutch our own Capitol dome. The name of the paw is Sedition and the talons are successively inscribed: League Court, Disarmament, Debt Cancellation, Internationalism and Pacifism.

Mr. Shearer proceeds to tell about the "Invisible Power" to whose dictates our welfare is being sacrificed.

"It was decided at that round table conference (in London) that the United States must come further under British influence and be destroyed as a seapower," he says. "Great Britain placed her agents in key positions through out the world. Every form of propaganda, every medium of education and influence is brought into effect."

This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.

Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest. —Joshua 1:8-9.

But his delight is in the law of the Lord; and in his law doth he meditate day and night. And he shall be like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf also shall not wither; and whatsoever he doeth shall prosper. —Psalm 1:2-3.

Hope Surgeons Keep Step With Latest In Field of Surgery and Medicine

Hope isn't really a city, as cities usually go, and is not supplied with night clubs and other things sometimes found in larger centers of population. But one thing Hope does have comparable, on a small scale, of course, with any city in the country. That is in the realm of medicine and surgery.

Only recently the leading hospitals of the country announced discovery of a spinal anesthetic, rendering the patient insensible to pain below the point of injection, and permitting a major operation without the following nausea from the effects of the old-style anesthetic.

Last week two such operations were performed in a local hospital with the aid of this new anesthetic. One of them was for appendicitis on a tubercular patient to whom it was impossible to administer ether or gas without grave danger. Both operations were untiringly successful, the patients being now well on the road to recovery.

Light's Golden Jubilee Brings Edison Close Back Home Again

Wizard Once Held Job With Western Union At Memphis and Still Swings A Wicked Key When He Takes Time Off To Visit Any Station.

The numerous celebrations to be held this fall in honor of Thomas A. Edison, in conjunction with Light's Golden Jubilee suggest similar tributes for other contributions which this grand old man of science has made to the world's progress. Possibly because it was his first work it is not so well known that Edison aided tremendously in the development of the art of telegraphy. His inventions of the duplex and the quadruplex methods of telegraphy, the Universal stock ticker, and various automatic relays and other pieces of telegraphic equipment have exerted a wide influence on the progress of this form of instantaneous communication.

Edison became interested in telegraphy when he was a news boy on the Grand Trunk Railway, at which time he was but fourteen years old. His taste for chemistry induced him to set up a laboratory in the empty baggage car always carried on his train. One of his experiments set the car on fire and so incensed the conductor that he summarily ejected the young inventor at Mount Clemens, Mich., the next station. Edison sold papers at this station, and out of gratitude for saving the life of his son the station agent taught him the Morse code and the lad soon became proficient enough to accept a job as a railway telegraph operator. Later the desire for travel manifested itself and he journeyed to Indianapolis where he went to work for the Western Union.

His early days as a telegraph operator took him to various parts of the country and he developed into an unusually expert operator, noted especially for the excellence of his handwriting. From Indianapolis Edison went to Cincinnati and then to Memphis, where he devised an automatic telegraph resend directly to New Orleans. He peater which enabled New York to next visited Nashville and left there for Louisville where he arrived cold, hungry and broke; but he soon got a job and remained in that city for two years, copying press reports. After a journey New Orleans he returned to Louisville; then went to his home in Port Huron and subsequently journeyed to Boston where he obtained work with the Western Union and, because of his speed and skill, was assigned to Number One New York wire.

In Boston he found conditions favorable for continuing his experimental work and invented a stock ticker and started a market quotation service. In 1868 he made an unsuccessful trip to New York in an effort to sell his stock ticker. After a fruitless trip to Rochester for the same purpose and a return to New York he got a position as expert in charge of the Gold Indicator Company's stock ticker service at the then munificent salary of $300.00 per month.

The young inventor built an electric printer which with several other improvements he sold to the Gold and Store Telegraph Company, and after the Western Union assumed control of this firm he was retained by General Marshall I. Telford, the president, to improve the ticker. The result of his labors was the Edison Universal Stock ticker which is in general use today. He received $40,000 for this invention and with this money in hand he opened up a factory, purchased machinery, hired men to work for him and went into the business of manufacturing tickers.

Probably the most important telegraph inventions of Edison were the duplex and quadruplex. For many years after the invention of professor Morse some of the best engineering brains not only in this country but in Europe, too, had been endeavoring to perfect some method whereby more than one message at one time could be sent over a single telegraph wire. Each attempt was found to be at fault in some particular or other which made it impractical. Edison put his mind on this problem and the result was the duplex method of telegraphy by which two messages may be sent over the same wire at once. Later he invented the quadruplex, which permits four messages to be sent simultaneously over a single wire. These two inventions resulted in the saving of millions of dollars to the telegraph companies and are considered today by telegraph experts to be the most important contributions to telegraphy since the invention of the telegraph.

In one of his business deals with the Western Union Edison made a peculiar stipulation. He sold two of his inventions outright to the Western Union with the specific understanding that he should receive $12,000 a year for them over a period of seventeen years, the life of the patents.

"I knew that if I got this money all at once I'd spend it in further experiments," Edison explained. "Getting it the way I did saved me from financial worries for seventeen years."

Even today Edison retains his interest in telegraphy and is still a proficient Morse operator. Describing his deafness which has become pronounced in recent years he is able to hear the dots and dashes of the Morse sounder and he has lost none of his aptitude at the key.

The healthiest 4-H club girl in Oklahoma is Virginia Weaver, 17-year-old lassie of Miami, Okla. Active garden work, daily trips of five miles to high school and other exercises were responsible for her physical condition which gave her a score of 98.7 per cent in state competition. She will represent Oklahoma in the national 4-H club health contest to be staged during the International Livestock Show in Chicago this fall.

Snake Hitch-Hiker Is New Things In Reptiles

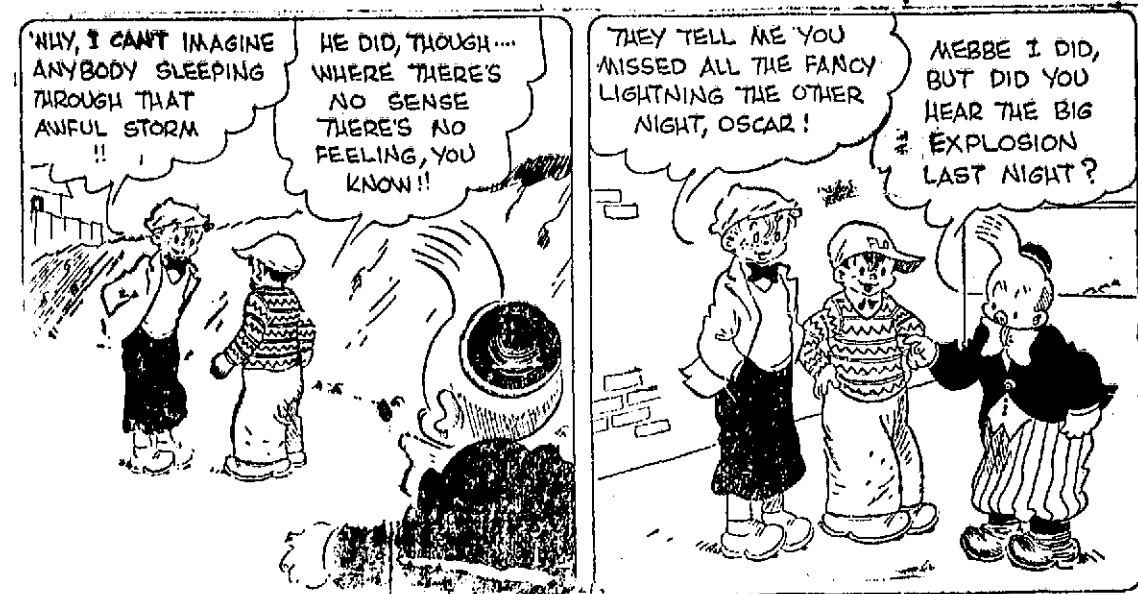

GOOSE CREEK, Texas, Sept. 24.—A 16-inch diamond-backed rattlesnake, with a lust for travel, and a motorist making a tour of west Texas, recently combined to make a filling station attendant wary of future requests for a change of battery water.

T. C. Jordan of Pelly, little realized while driving peacefully on his way that he was playing host to the ride-stealing reptile. He became cognizant of the fact rather abruptly, however, when the attendant informed him of the presence of the snake which was curled up placidly on the battery box, having ridden a distance of some 500 miles.

Mrs. Coolidge Writes Poem On Anniversary of Death of Young Son

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—(P)—The following poem by Mrs. Grace Coolidge, inspired by the fifth anniversary of the death of her son, Calvin Coolidge, Jr., appears in the current issue of Good Housekeeping:

THE OPEN DOOR
(By Grace Coolidge)
(Copyright 1929, by Good Housekeeping Magazine)

You, my son,
Have shown me God.
Your kiss upon my cheek
Has made me feel the gentle touch
Of Him who leads us on.
The memory of your smile when young
Reveals His face,
As mellowing years come on Apace,
And when you went before
That I might glimpse
Coming from afar,
The glories of His grace.
Hold, son, my hand
Guide me along the path
That, coming
I may stumble not,
Nor roam,
Nor fail to show the way
Which leads us home.

In a letter to the editor of the magazine, Mrs. Coolidge disclosed that she was sending the check for $250, sent her by the magazine for the poem, to her son, John, "and asking him to use it for something in the new home, which I hope he may soon establish, in some way that his brother might have chosen were he here."

John Coolidge was married Monday to Miss Florence Trumbull daughter of Governor John H. Trumbull, of Connecticut.

She Liked Her Cash Cool But Got Hot When Lost It

FORT SMITH, Ark., Sept. 24.—(P)—One Fort Smith housewife liked her cash cool. Putting it in her refrigerator because she distrusted banks, the housewife said the ice box and later frantically called Grady Seerest, official of a local transfer company, in an effort to have the refrigerator sent back. She forgot she put $700 in it. Secret went to the home of the purchasers, and found that in the chaos of moving they had not looked into it. He recovered the fat purse and restored it to its owner. Seerest said although the money had never burnt her fingers, the housewife now keeps nothing on ice but food.

Goebel Waits for Others So May Continue Race

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 24.—(P)—Col. Roberto Fierro, Mexican army ace, missing since yesterday in the air race from Mexico City to Kansas City, turned up today at Apulco, state of Hidalgo. He was unhurt and landed on account of the fog. It is not known at Val Buena field whether the four Mexican aviators who turned back in the Kansas City race will make a new attempt to fly to Tampico and resume race.

Assails Alimony Grabbers

Why did Earle Peacock kill his pretty young wife? "He was 'legally insane,'" declared Defense Attorney Sydney A. Syme, lower left, as the young radio expert went on trial at White Plains, N. Y., for the "torch killing." "He was a cold-blooded murderer," contended District Attorney Frank H. Coyne, upper right. Two friends of the slain woman, Bertha Kappus, left, and Elvira Howard are pictured above as they waited in the court room to be called upon to testify.

Rescue in European Lake Disaster

Albert B. Fall (left) will go to trial October 7 on a charge of accepting a $100,000 bribe in connection with naval oil leases. Alice Pomerehne (upper right) is special government prosecutor. Harry M. Daugherty (lower right) will be a witness.

Indian "Revolt" Against Road Comes To End

WOLF POINT, Mont., Sept. 24.—The 1929 Indian "revolt" has been ended, the warring braves sent back to the reservation, and peace restored at Wolf Point bridge.

The revolt started when a band of Indians objected to the construction of approaches to a new bridge, claiming that the road infringed upon Indian property. The Redskins "attacked" the road builders, interfering with the work of tractors and scrapers, "getting in the way" of these implements, and in general making themselves such nuisances that work had to be discontinued while the arguments of the native Americans were battled out in federal court.

Quelling of the war was accomplished when the Indians were promised they would be paid damages in amounts to be adjudged by the United States district court.

AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL - POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Helen Page feels unhappy when her classmates accuse her of being in love with her handsome guardian, Leonard Brent. But he represents all that she knows of home and family and she adores him blindly.

Brent changes all his plans for Helen's future after a chance meeting with a dying beggar, Charles Owens Nellin, who tells a strange story which Brent is able to corroborate to some extent by a visit to Yonkers.

On graduating, Helen reminds her guardian of his promise to reveal her parentage and is amazed when he informs her that she is heiress of a millionaire, Cyril K. Cunningham, and that he promised her parents to take her to him when she was 18. They go to Yonkers and Brent introduces her to Cunningham as his granddaughter. He offers as proof the locket containing a picture of Evangeline Cunningham, which he had taken from the dying Nellin.

Helen remains at Bramblewood while the lawyer investigates the story. Cunningham presents her with a car which she drives everywhere. One day she accidentally strikes a girl, Eva Ennis, who has to be taken to the hospital. Eva's brother, Robert, up-braids Helen for her selfish recklessness and then, noting her unstrung condition, offers to drive her home. Cunningham receives him graciously and invites him to spend the evening. The young couple go for a canoe ride.

Next day Brent arrives and when he hears about her meeting with Robert asks her to go to New York for dinner and the theatre.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

"Pd love to," Helen exclaimed happily. "It's been terrible dull out here."

"I know," Brent agreed, "but I've hesitated to ask you before in fear that I might antagonize your grandfather and do you some harm."

"I don't think he would mind letting me go," Helen said. "He's really very kind. Shall I drive in with you?"

Brent made a quick excuse. "I have an engagement tonight," he said. "Will you come tomorrow?"

Helen's disappointment was instant, also her understanding of it. One of Leonard's many charming women friends, of course. She felt herself grow a little cold over the thought that again there was someone before her.

But she would not give in to the omplse to refuse his invitation altogether, seeing clearly that it would be childish to do so.

"Tomorrow, then," she said listlessly. Brent overlooked her tone, refusing to make an issue of it.

They talked of plays on the drive back to Bramblewood and Helen began to take an interest in selecting the one they would see together.

The next day she went to see Eva just before starting for New York, and Bob's name was not mentioned. Eva would not thrust it forward and Helen seemed to have forgotten him. Her anticipation of an evening with Leonard, at dinner and at the theatre, had obscured all else.

Brent met her at the Grand Central Station and took her to his hotel, where he had engaged a room for her in which to change into her evening clothes. When she was dressed and went down to meet him she was a vision of loveliness.

Brent was proud of her, proud of the attention she attracted, but his heart beat no faster at the touch of her soft hands, the sight of her eager, animated countenance.

From dinner they went on to the play—a romantic love story with the modern twist—an unhappy ending. It chilled Helen but her spirits revived again when Brent took her to one of the more restrained clubs and they danced for an hour.

Then they got her suitcase from the hotel and Brent drove her home. And for the first time he kissed her on her lips. It was in the dim light of the great hall at Bramblewood. Helen trembled in his arms like a wild animal that finds itself in strange surroundings.

"I love you," Brent whispered in to her ear. "I love you."

Helen dropped against him. She did not say to him, "I love you."

The words did not come to her. And she was without regret that they did not, for the omission was unnoticed on her part.

Brent was not so oblivious. He glimpsed defeat. Helen felt his arms tighten around her, then slacken. He had vowed himself against destroying her romantic illusions. He knew that he fascinated her, and he knew what to do.

Gently he held her away from him. "You must forgive me," he said with infinite pathos in his voice. "I had no right to do that."

His hand slipped from hers, pressed them, let them go. It was a gesture of renunciation, meant to awaken pity.

When he was gone Helen felt very tender toward him. She stood at her window and watched the road down which he had driven and hoped with a wildness that even she smiled over that he would come back.

The next day she was exceedingly sweet and soft with her grandfather and the old man made up his mind to a course of action that had suggested itself several days before.

He sent for Mr. Greaves and asked for report on the progress of the investigation of Helen's parentage.

There was nothing new.

"It seems improbable, does it not, that if Helen is not my granddaughter I shall not locate the legitimate heiress?" Mr. Cunningham quired. Before he could be answered he added sharply: "with in my lifetime, I mean. That cannot be long, you know, Greaves."

Mr. Greaves nodded. He understood what was going on in his client's mind. He had seen it coming.

"I've grown to love Helen—whoever she is—and as my granddaughter," Mr. Cunningham went on. "I shall leave my fortune on condition that she is not proved to be an imposter. In that event it will be held for my legitimate heirs. You may destroy my former will, Greaves, and make another."

There was nothing in their souls to meet—no common transport for them. And it did not suit Brent to allow Helen's beauty to move him. His game with her was far too serious for what he called "trivial nonsense."

But Helen's anticipation of a wonderful time had affected her emotions to the point of obliterating doubt and uncertainty. Brent was the Brent of her school days to her. Let him be cold. She was used to that. She loved him just the same.

The kiss that he bestowed upon his fingers tingled there only slightly less than would her lips had he chosen them to receive the caress.

She was enjoying herself with the delicious misery of a young girl who feels herself hopelessly in love with an older man. Leonard might tell her that he loved her, but she knew that he did not live for her alone.

She forgot that only yesterday she had not wanted him to manifest love through jealousy—forgot that she had been loath to talk about Bob Ennis. She was enthralled with the time, the place and the man.

These two members of the British cabinet have furnished fireworks for the European political situation lately by offering new policies for their government in its dealings with other nations. Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson (at left) has just proposed that the League of Nations covenant be amended to harmonize with the Kellogg anti-war treaty, while Philip Snowden (right), chancellor of the exchequer, recently jarrd England's former allies by demanding for England a larger share of the German reparations payments.

This Ramboillet ram is the reason for the high price of woolen clothing. He sold for $1525 at the annual ram sale of the National Wool Growers' Association in Salt Lake City. This price topped last year's record by $500.

Helen was with Eva, having a confidential chat with her, when the will that made her heiress to a fortune of millions was drawn up, witnessed and signed.

Eva was talking about her ambition. She dreamed of being a world-famous violinist.

"Bob is going to be a lawyer," she interjected suddenly. "He's a dear, works day and night. You know, he's paying for my lessons. I hate to have him sacrifice himself as he does, but I'll pay it all back some day."

She sighed gently. "It's awfully hard to get anywhere in music."

"I intend to make it easier for you," Helen said.

Eva looked at her with widening eyes. "You will make me very unhappy if you refuse," Helen told her. "I dislike owing any kind of debt, so please don't argue with me. My conscience will be much easier if I know you are glad we met." She laughed and added: "Even as we did."

And by the time Eva was able to go home Helen felt sure that she was glad they had met. And she herself was glad too. For she had never known a girl as guilelessly dear as Eva. Her soul seemed to be untouched by anything but beauty.

They grew, during the remainder of Eva's convalescence, to be real friends. Helen came often to the humble Ennis home and later, when Eva was able to drive to Bramblewood with her, they spent many hours there.

Of Bob Helen saw but little. That little was a great deal to him, however. He loved her. Loved her so that living had become a torture. His mind refused to hold any thought that was not of her. He could not study, could not work. His mother worried over his loss of appetite, and his wakefulness worked havoc with his appearance. He was hollow-eyed and haggard. He had no hope.

Aside from the barrier of their distant stations in life, Bob knew that Helen, whatever the slight interest she had shown in him that night on the lake, did not care for him. She was polite, of course, but meant nothing at all to her.

For Helen was absorbed, completely, with Leonard Brent. She had gone to New York with him on several occasions since the night he kissed her.

And she hoped to spend her birthday with him, but a few days before that date her grandfather made an unusual request of her. (To Be Continued)

LITTLE ROCK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—D. D. Adams, former Batesville banker, today won a new trial in his appeal to the Supreme Court from a conviction of a charge of making a false entry in the records of the now defunct Union Bank A Trust Co., of Batesville. He was convicted in the Independence circuit court and given seven years.

The Supreme Court reversed the case and remanded it for trial on the ground that in refusing to per the introduction of certain evidence by which the defense sought to show the entry was not made for the purpose of defrauding the bank, as the complaint alleged, the court erred.

The sentence of Charley Roe, who was sentenced to life imprisonment from Craighead county on a charge of murder in connection with the death of W. J. Puer, of Lake City, was affirmed. Roe sought a reversal on the ground that certain evidence, tending to show he shot in self defense, had been excluded. Officers said the killing grew out of Pace's alleged attention to Mrs. Roe.

They May Star in Dixie Series

Harry Harris To Stick
With the baseball season about at least half a dozen managers of American and National League teams are walking toward the gate for discussion of their successors.

One who will stick, in spite of the rather disappointing showing of the Detroit team is Bucky Harris, who has been signed for another year. Harris is not being talked for the showing of the Bengals, writes Harry Bullion in the Detroit Free Press. Here is how Harry tells it:

Personally the people of Detroit are concerned only with the success or failure of the Tigers. It's enough, no matter how one looks at the case, since the last time the Bengals gave them a thrill, the men then have become fathers. The owners of the club here, Frank J. Navin and Walter O. Briggs, were supposed to have spent a lot of money last year for new chattels, something like a quarter of a million dollars.

Tale of Sale

The men obtained on the auction block didn't provide material and any other manager could buy the same talent for much less now. Baseball, in the winter especially, is mostly fiction. Prices paid for ball players are inflated to the bursting point. Detroit should change its scouting system or the owners of the club might save themselves considerable grief if they did the scouting themselves. If Navin and Briggs paid $100,000 for Alexander and Prudhomme, for instance, they were "gypped," but the suspicion is current that Sir Conan Doyle wrote the story of that sale.

Between the acquisition of Alexander and Prudhomme the Tigers at no fewer than seven players to the Toronto club. Response hit management of the Leafs and they are beginning to send some of the players back in the way of pitchers transferred to Toronto, joined the "Tigers" recently.

Manager Harris has made a number of changes since the Tigers came out of the south last spring, and if he still is of the same constructive turn of mind he will make a lot more.

Detroit never will be a permanent contender with its present roster. Perhaps, as believed by the majority of Navin Field patrons, Harris did some good for the cause when he dismissed nearly a dozen of the boys who were affiliated with the club in the south, but there are several more who would be of immeasurable benefit to the Tigers if they played somewhere else.

There are too many individual players on the roster of the Tigers now, and a couple of chaps who are sitting in the manager's lap might be better thought of if they were their club allegiance.

Personally, Manager Harris is a likable fellow. He would be a great manager if he had material that would fill the purpose better. Right now it is good for what is almost obsolete equipment for the likes of Indians who remember the decorations of cigar stores, the idea to be placed out in front of tobacco stores.

It is hoped that Harris will manage the Tigers for one, three or ten years. He'll get results eventually, because the Tigers, as a whole, would play their heads off for him. Right now, though, what the team needs most of all is a manager that has enough head to sacrifice for him.

Harris did the best he could with what was given him, and he wins on that.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Victorio Campolo is said to be guffed at his manager, Gustavo Beney, because Gus was a great cut during camp activities. "It's said they have between them only a gentleman's agreement. Didn't know there were any gentlemen's agreements between boxers and managers. Before you have such an agreement you have to have the gentleman—Campolo is independently wealthy and has a family crest dating back to the days of the early Neapolitan kings—Miller Huggins is said to be quite a little concerned over the way Lou Gehrig has dropped off in hitting—Lou never was a wonderful fielder—George Lott not only plays tennis but was a good football player and pitched good ball for the Maroons.

Figures in Ohio Football Dispute

Charges of player buying, hurled at Ohio State University by Coach Ralph Vince of John Carroll University, Cleveland, have stirred up a new storm in Ohio football. Ted Rosequist, above, promising tackle, is the center of the controversy. Vince charges that an Ohio State senior offered Rosequist free tuition board and lodging and a job that would give him spending money if he would come to Ohio and play football. Coach Sam Williamson of Ohio and other officials of the state university denied any attempted buying of football material.

Waldo-Stamps To Meet Here Friday

High School Elevens To Play Curtain Raiser for Big Show.

An added attraction for the Southwest Arkansas Fair here this week is announced for Friday morning with the statement that the Stamps Yellow-Jackets, snappy football team, will mingle generally with the eleven from Waldo, the game to be a sort of curtain-raiser for the Tiger-Mulerider fray in the afternoon.

Stamps and Waldo school officials readily agreed to have their pig skin chasers meet here to add to the attractiveness of the Fair and to make it the more interesting.

Stamps schools will close for the day to give youngsters a chance to watch their Yellow Jackets swarm over the gridiron. Waldo will be here in force a sharp struggle is expected.

AN ANCIENT PREJUDICE HAS BEEN REMOVED

That ancient prejudice which hoarded gold with the fanatical zeal of the miser has vanished. Under the sheltering wing of AMERICAN INTELLIGENCE flourish thousands of banking institutions to which the individual safely entrusts his wealth.

"toasting did it"—

Gone is that ancient prejudice against cigarettes—Progress has been made. We removed the prejudice against cigarettes when we removed harmful corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from the tobaccos.

YEARS ago, when cigarettes were made without the aid of modern science, there originated that ancient prejudice against all cigarettes. That criticism is no longer justified. LUCKY STRIKE, the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the choicest tobacco, properly aged and skillfully blended—"It's Toasted."

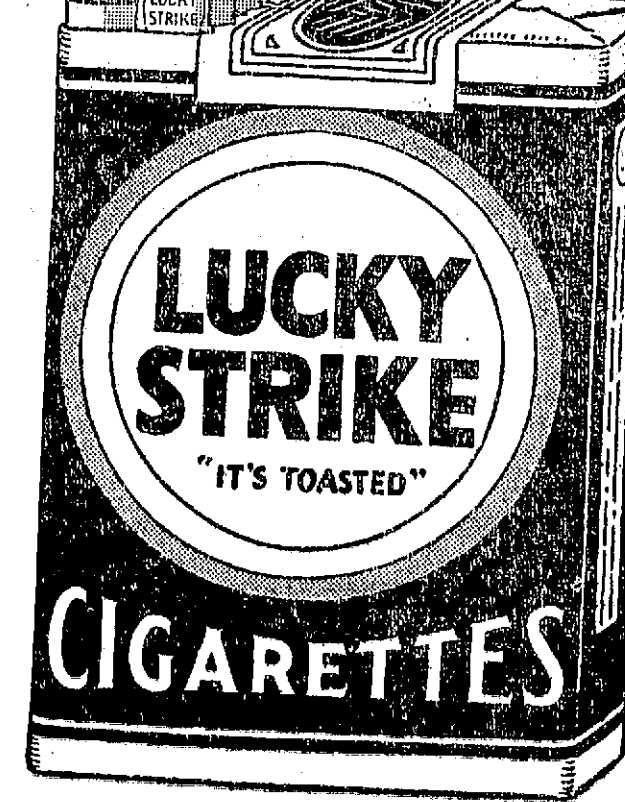

"TOASTING," the most modern step in cigarette manufacture, removes from LUCKY STRIKE harmful irritants which are present in cigarettes manufactured in the old-fashioned way.

Everyone knows that heat purifies, and so "TOASTING"—LUCKY STRIKE'S extra secret process—removes harmful, corrosive ACRIDS (pungent irritants) from LUCKIES which in the old-fashioned manufacture of cigarettes cause throat irritation and coughing. Thus "TOASTING" has destroyed that ancient prejudice against cigarette smoking by men and by women.

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation-No Cough.

"It's Toasted"—the phrase that describes the extra "toasting" process applied in the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes. The finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—are scientifically subjected to penetrating heat at minimum, 260°—maximum, 300°, Fahrenheit. The exact, expert regulation of such high temperatures removes impurities. More than a slogan, "It's Toasted" is recognized by millions as the most modern step in cigarette manufacture.

Must Plant More Feed This Autumn

Shortage Means Prohibitive Costs Next Spring, Warning Here.

More feedstuff must be planted this fall than ever before by Arkansas farmers, for there is a serious shortage, T. Roy Reid, of the University Extension Service writes to Roy Anderson, cashier of the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co.

Mr. Reid says in his letter: "In this morning's mail I received a copy of the advertisement of the Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. headed 'The Price of Cotton—What Does It Cost You to Raise It?' This should be very helpful in connection with the fall feed campaign. It looks now as if we shall have a serious shortage of feed in a number of sections of the state, and that it would be greedy to the interest of the farmers to begin now to provide fall crops which would lessen the cost of feed which would be purchased next year. This shortage of feed is not only in Arkansas, but extends throughout the country, so that the price of feed for next year will likely be very high.

"Our corn shortage in this state will average about 45 bushels to the farm less than the 10-year average, and more than that less than the crops made last year. This is probably about the amount which is fed to one mule on the average farm in the state, and will add greatly to the expense of making a crop if his must be purchased along with hay or other roughage to provide for the further needs of the mule greatly to keep up our feed production in order that our program for the development of dairying may not be hindered at this time.

Hope Furniture Has Unique Booth

Make Special Appeal To Women In Timely Showing At Fair.

Hope Furniture Co., in connection with Estate Gas Range manufacturers, has one of the most attractive and unique exhibits at Fair Park this week—and it is just a cooking and baking demonstration. On opening night most of the women-folks attending the fair visited the booth and expressed admiration at the work being done there.

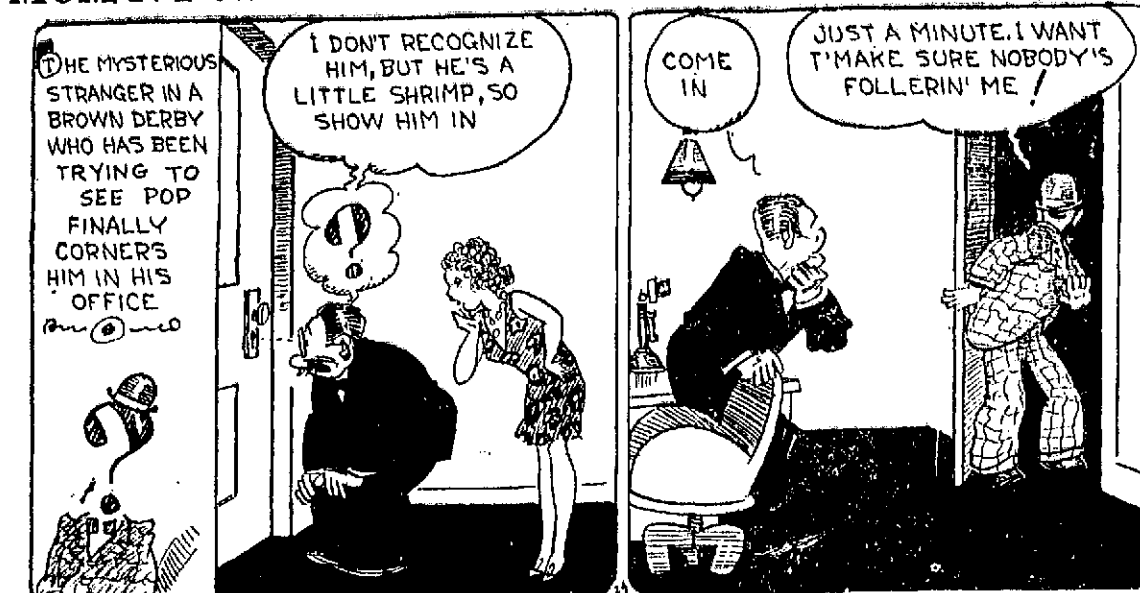

Mrs. J. R. McCain, one among the best known domestic science lecturers and demonstrators in the southwest is in charge of the booth and during the fair will conduct a series of baking and cooking demonstrations. She will be at her range each day this week, glad to be of any assistance possible to any one interested sufficiently to make inquiries.

POPULAR LEWIS STONE IN "WONDER OF WOMEN"

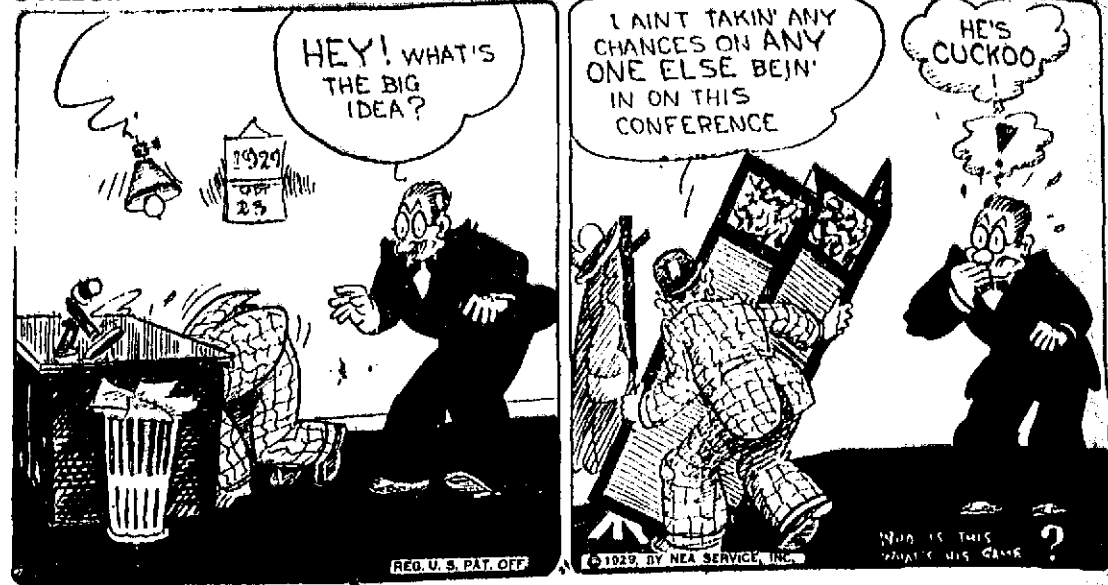

Lewis Stone, who in the past year has played many outstanding roles of the screen, is the hero of "Wonder of Women," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's gripping human drama of modern Europe, playing at the Saenger theatre, sound and dialogue. It is the first role since his outstanding triumph with Ruth Chatterton in "Madame X." Clarence Brown directed the new play, adapted by Hess Meredith from Hermann Sudermann's famous novel, "The Wife of Stephen Tromholt," and Peggy Wood, famous stage star, plays the heroine. Lella Hyams, Harry Myers, George Fawcett, Sarah Padden and other artists of note are in the cast.

The story, tense in its human interest plot, depicts the life and love of a temperamental German composer, who although he adores his wife, cannot resist the charms of other women. There is pathos and tragedy in the play as well as humor and romance. This is the second Sudermann novel Brown has filmed, the first being the highly successful "Flesh and the Devil."

IMPROVEMENT SOON NOTICED

Lady Had Been Getting Weaker and Weaker Until She Took Cardui.

Schofield, Va.—"I certainly praise Cardui, for it helped me," says Mrs. Mollie Edwards of 64 Lee Street, this city.

"I was sick in bed. I had been weak and run-down for a long time.

"I was very much worried about myself. At that time I was at home alone with my little children. I was not able to be up and take care of them.

"I was very weak; didn't seem to have any strength at all. I was getting weaker and weaker, and didn't know what to do.

"I had read about Cardui, so I sent to the store and got a bottle to take. I began getting better real soon, so I continued taking the medicine. I took it for some time, and my improvement was wonderful. I was able to get up and do all my work."

"Thousands of other women, who had been in a weak, run-down condition, have written that after taking Cardui their health improved. Get a bottle today. It may be just what you need."

the $100,000, brought to him "in a little black satchel" by the son of Edward L. Doherty, bribed him to leave the Elks Hills, Cal., oil reserves to his "old friend and fellow prospector."

If Fall is found guilty it will be the first conviction in five long years of prosecution in the oil scandal cases. Harry F. Sinclair went to jail, but his concurrent six months sentences were for contempt of the senate in refusing to answer questions and for jury shadowing. All of the trials for conspiracy and fraud have resulted in either acquittal or mistrial.

Through civil suits all property involved has been returned to the government. In addition, it has possession of valuable equipment set up by the Sinclair and Doherty operations. Royalties were paid on all oil taken from the reserves and Leo A. Rover, federal district attorney who will assist Allee Pomeroy and Owen J. Roberts, special counsel in prosecuting Fall, says the government has not lost a cent.

Prosecution of bribery charges against Fall and against Doherty is virtually all that remains to be done before the docket is cleared of the maelstrom that almost wrecked an administration and aroused the wrath of a nation.

Convicted, Fall will face a fine of not more than three times the amount of the alleged bribe, not more than three years imprisonment, and the specification that he never again may hold public office.

If he is not convicted, it is probable the charges against Doherty will be dropped and the curtain rung down forever.

Harry M. Daugherty, former attorney general of the United States, is expected to be a witness at the trial.

Fire At Fair Grounds Causes

Duck-Bill Boy To Lose Quarters

The Southwest Arkansas Fair, opened for its annual week's run here last night, got off to a flying start, with fireworks—and a pair of the concession preformers temporarily absenting themselves from the lot.

A wagon, used as a dressing room for the duck-bill boy, which was quartered near that of the rat-eater in some unexplained manner, took fire. One of the dancing girls noticed the blaze and let out a scream which served admirably as a fire siren. A leather-lunged barker took up the cry—and pronto there was a sound of roaring motor and clanging bell as the fire department reached the scene. Then the pungent smell of smoke as the blaze subsided before the chemical attack directed at it by the fire boys. Then the various shows took up their routine work and the fire boys came back to town.

All of which was but a prelude to the excitement following. For the duck-bill boy and the rat-eater were missing. They had departed that place when the fire got going and responded not to frantic "quack-quacks" of searchers nor frequent promises of an extra rat for dinner. They were unanimously and collectively absent. Officers were hurriedly summoned and the search spread to remote corners of the big park.

The rat eater was found off in a secluded corner, returning willingly enough when the fire had been extinguished. But the duck-bill boy was still gone when the fireworks were all over and the crowd dispersing. And if he returned at all last night he slept some other place beside his regular dressing room for that place was no more.

The fire department caused momentary confusion by rushing through the gates without pausing to buy tickets but got out without any excitement. Which indicates that Fair will be full of unexpected happenings.
